Rheumatism Soon Becomes Chronic

The Result of Tired Kidneys Failing to Expel Poisonous Waste Matter.

Tired, overworked kidneys allow poisonous uric acid to remain in the blood instead of expelling it from the system. That is the cause of chronic rheumatism. The disease gets into some joint or group of muscles and settles there, and only strenuous treatment will dislodge it.

Rheuma softens the uric acid crystals lodged in the joints and muscles, rausing the terrible pains, and passes them out of the system through the kidneys and bowels.

All the blood in the body passes forough the kidneys once every three minutes. Unless it is pure the organs become diseased. Rheuma purifies the blood and the kidneys, then regain their natural activity.

Lee & Osgood and all druggists sell Rheuma at a price so inexpensive that it is folly to be without it.

DAYVILLE HEN

Getting a Place in the Hall of Fame Through New York Humorists.

Fame has come to the aged black Spanish hen owned by James Blanch-ard of Dayville and introduced to the public in this column one day last week. Down in the rural village of New York she was made the subject New York she was made the subject of a write-up in a Sunday paper. Evidently that New York crowd don't believe that there is a hen 27 years of age in the town of Killingly, but Killingly doesn't care anything about that, because Killingly is as big as New York in some ways, and bigger when it comes to aged hens. Here's what the New York Sunday story says on the subject of that wonderful hen:
"Eusafia Palladino," the oldest hen in the town of Killingly and perhaps in the entire world, is to have a birthday party on the occasion of her twenty-seventh birthday, which falls on June 2. All the old hens in Killingly are looking forward to the event, and June 2. All the old hens in Killingly are looking forward to the event, and it is probable that a few young chickens will be asked, just to give the party a metropolitan flavor.

"Eusapla," though of Spanish erigin, lays her eggs in English and began the work when but five months old. Her first egg, which her owner, James Blanchard, still has, was land in November, 1888, and since then she has laid an average of 144 eggs a year. She has just laid another egg as this story is being written and only the very greatest haste can prevent her from laying another before it is finished.

shed.

She just lays around all day, as might be expected at her great age.
Unlike the Madagascar Bingle Hen, which lays square eggs with a monogram, Eusapia lays but one egg at a time.

Eurapia, it will be readily reckoned, was hatched from a black Spanish egg ten years before the Spanish-American war, when shells burst less frequently. She has seen a very active life and greatly deplores the dissipation, irregular hours and loss of sleep incident to poultry shows which have become popular of late years. She does not smoke, has never on any occasion partaken of alcoholic liquors and can now read without glasses if and can now read without glasses if she cared to.

Mr. Blanchard has had several dis-
